Free System

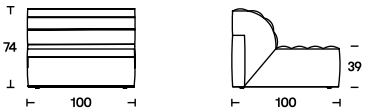

Year	1973 - 2023
Designer	Claudio Salocchi

In 1973, Claudio Salocchi designed Free System, an upholstered sofa system based on the concept of an “operational flooring”, inspired by the tatami, in which modules can be freely combined. A project that interprets a fluid and open idea of space, expressing a new vision of living. Corner modules, seats with interchangeable backrests, poufs and tatami elements shape a modular programme capable of generating a wide range of configurations: from islands that encourage a free, versatile and informal way of experiencing the living area to more classic linear or corner arrangements.

Finishes

Upholstered furniture system with modular elements on a supporting structure of solid wood and plywood, base with elastic straps, feet and concealed coupling system. Padding in single-density polyurethane foam and polyester wadding.
The upholstery on seats and back is quilted to enhance softness and increase seating comfort thanks to shaped polyurethane rubber inserts. The sofa is completely upholstered with removable covers. The coupling system uses special plastic clips.
